GROUP, L.L.C.

MECHANICAL & ELECTRICAL CONTRACTORS

For Immediate Release – June 1st, 2020

As an extra level of safety and protection, The Cherokee Group now offers UV-C air purifier systems for heating/cooling units of all sizes. Studies continue to show that UV-C light is an effective treatment that kills or inactivates airborne viruses, bacteria, mold and other contaminants and allergens. The Cherokee Group is currently installing a variety of units across The Old Mill Square to provide another layer of protection for employees and visitors.

“The Old Mill Square is committed to doing our part to operate safely for our employees and visitors to our restaurants and retail stores” says owner Al Blanton. “In addition to following CDC and state guidelines, we are taking it a step further. Installation is already underway and will continue until we install in every building on our property. Taking care of our guests has always been paramount and we feel these steps will provide a safer and healthier environment.”

Old Forge Distillery was one of the first locations to have the UV-C filters installed. “The Cherokee Group has always provided leading edge technology and service to Old Forge Distillery” says co-owner Craig Faulkner. “We are excited to be one of the first businesses to take this extra step in providing a healthier environment for our guests and staff.”

The Cherokee Group offers a variety of cost-effective systems that will prevent the spread of airborne viruses and bacteria by killing the particulates in the air. From options starting as low as $599, TCG expert air quality specialists will work directly with businesses and individuals to find the product right for your facility or home.
